LABELLE IRON WORKS ORE CASE IN HIGH COURT

Question at Issue Status of Increased Value of Lands.

BOUGHT FOR $190,000

Appraisal 13 Years Later Makes Value $10,000,000; Government Holds Advance Is Profit and Is Subject to Taxation as Such.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Arguments were begun today in the Supreme court in the "invested capital" case, characterized by Solicitor General Frierson as "the most important legal question since the landmark decision of the Supreme court in 1907." Whether the government will be forced to return hundreds of millions of dollars paid as income taxes depends on the outcome.

The immediate cause at issue before the court is the appeal of the LaBelle Iron Works from a ruling of a Bureau of Internal Revenue refusing to allow it to treat as invested capital the value of ore lands which it had purchased in 1904 for $190,000 and which by 1917 had increased to $10,000,000. The government agents maintained that the increase in value was "profit" and should be taxed as such. The company added the increase to its capital, invested and claimed the normal deduction of seven percent, paying under protest the additional tax of $1,081,000.

The question of whether a stock dividend is taxable arose in a new form in the present case. The increased value of the ore land having been represented on the books of the corporation according to the government's brief since 1912 as "stock issued as a stock dividend."

The wide interest displayed in the case in the business world was illustrated by the number of requests for permission to appear as "friends of the court."

LEWIS A. Sullivanberger of Homestead township, Westmoreland county, has brought suit against the West Penn Railways company to recover $5,000 damages.

WILLIAM CLIFFORD, MINE FAN INVENTOR, DIES IN THE SOUTH

Was Formerly Head of Manufacturing Plant Located Near Jeannette; Well Known in Lake Region.

GREENSBURG, Jan. 7.—William Clifford, 75 years old, one of the greatest mechanical experts of the country, mine fan inventor, formerly a resident of Jeannette for more than 20 years, died at his home at Hendersonville, North Carolina, several days after Christmas. Mr. Clifford was well known throughout the mining district of Western Pennsylvania.

About 25 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Clifford came to this country from England. They settled at Jeannette where Mr. Clifford, then at the height of his inventive activity, established the Clifford-Cappell Fan works, north of Jeannette, above the Harrison City road. He invented a fan that was a great improvement over all other mine fans of the time. The Keystone Coal & Coke company has six of them in use at their mines at the present time. Other coal companies in the western part of the state as well as in other states, installed the fan and these are still in use.

Mr. Clifford erected a fine house north of his fan plant where he and his wife resided until she died about six years ago. It was his desire to take her body across the ocean and inter it near her home in England. Conditions were such that he was unable to return with his wife's body at once and an undertaker embalmed it and it was kept here nearly a year. Later he accompanied the body to England.

Mr. Clifford remained in England for some time. While there he married again and brought his wife to America. About four years ago Mr. Clifford sold his fan works to the Elliott company which is now engaged in manufacturing iron and steel products. The plant at present is valued at between $250,000 and $300,000.

Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Clifford went south. At one time they resided in Florida. Later they went to Atlanta and then to Hendersonville.

Mr. Clifford was a member of the North of England Institute of Mining and Mechanical Engineers. This is one of the highest organizations of its kind in the world. At different times he wrote articles for the official publication. He was also a member of the Engineering Society of Western Pennsylvania.

FIRE LOSS IN CITY DURING 1920 $10,955, CHIEF DEBOLT REPORTS

Total For Five Years But $38,050, As Compared With $65,000 in Year 1915 Alone.

Figures announced by Fire Chief W. E. DeBolt show that the fire loss in Connellsville for 1920 was $10,955. Three fires were responsible for bringing the figures up to this total, which is considered a low one. In the past five years, during the administration of Mr. DeBolt as chief, the total fire loss has only been $38,050. In 1915 alone it was $65,000. During the five-year period the fire loss has not totaled the amount of premiums paid on properties in this city during a single year.

In the past 12 months the firemen answered 94 alarms. Of this number seven were outside the city and seven were false. There was a consumption of 340 gallons of chemicals, 370 gallons of gasoline and 15 gallons of oil. Twenty thousand feet of fire hose was laid.

The fire loss by months, according to the chief's report, was: January, $1,550; February, $1,700; March, $2,080; April, $25; May, $625; June, $0; July, $3,100; August, $0; September, $1,500; October, $5; November, $200; December, $100.

Insurance on the properties damaged to any extent totaled $106,950.

QUESTION OF DANCES BEFORE CITY COUNCIL

Agitation Will Be Taken Up at Meeting on Monday Night.

FLAW FOUND IN STATE LAW

The matter of regulation of dances in the city will probably be taken up by city council at its next meeting. The city solicitor has looked up the law on dancing, which gives the police authorities power to stop the amusement if, in their opinion, it becomes disorderly or continues over the time limit.

Chief McDonald reports there is a flaw in the law, which provides for the fine of $50 if there is any violation of it, but that it carries no provision for punishment if the fine is not paid. This makes the officers powerless, he points out, if violators refuse to pay a fine when arraigned before the mayor.

While the chief does not anticipate having to make any arrests he does not relish the idea of doing so and then having to allow the offender to go because there is no imprisonment clause written in the law. It is his opinion that council should pass an ordinance to be effective in the city. Such an ordinance would not conflict with the state law and for that reason would be permissible.

The legislation in regard to dancing has never been enforced here. The chief says that as long as the law has been enacted it should be put into operation. This would call for the paying of a license by every dance hall and dancing institution. It would also require that permission be secured to hold a dance and that the sum of $1 be paid for every one held. This is revenue which the city should be receiving and which has been allowed to slip by merely because the law was never made effective.

The attitude of council regarding the question is not known. Chief McDonald is very outspoken in his stand on the question. He believes the authority to prohibit organizations or individuals from holding dances if they violated the law would tend to put the amusement on a higher scale here.

STATE TAKES HAND IN ABATING WATER SUPPLY NUISANCE AT TARENTUM

Servise Company Given 10 Days in Which to Show Cause Why It Should Not Cease to Do Business.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 7.—The Tarentum Water company, operating in Tarentum and Brackenridge, Allegheny county, was today given 10 days in which to show cause why it should not be compelled to discontinue service on the ground that the water served is detrimental to the public health, by Attorney General Alter at the instance of Colonel Edward Martin, state commissioner of health, following notice to improve the quality.

The bill charges that water furnished is and has been for a considerable time past detrimental to the public health and the cause of disease and mortality in that it contains large quantities of germs of typhoid fever. The company was notified on November 23 to discontinue furnishing such water but it has not improved the quality. It is charged, the statement being made that the water supply "constitutes a great and continuing public nuisance and menace to public health."

Service of the order was accepted by attorneys for the company.

"PRACTICAL" PROHIBITION IN GENERATION

Oncoming One Will Grow Up Without Taste For Liquor, Says Kramer.

WEST ALREADY IS DRY

Absolute Elimination of Manufacturing and Use of Intoxicants Can Never Be Realized, Commissioner Declares; Officers Doing Their Duty

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The United States will never be literally dry, Prohibition Enforcement Commissioner Kramer stated today, although he expressed the opinion prohibition is here to stay. Sentiment throughout the country, he said, is continually growing stronger for prohibition and practical prohibition will be realized after the present generation, which is familiar with liquor, is gone. "Though there probably always will be some few individuals who will make intoxicants in their homes, the sons and daughters of the men and women of today will grow up without a taste for liquor," he continued.

The commissioner declared that despite evidence of lawbreaking in some sections of the country, as a whole is behind the amendment to the constitution. New York, he asserted, cannot be considered as reflecting the attitude of the country at large and in general view of Pittsburgh the country is dry. Difficulties experienced with prohibition agents were to be expected, he declared, but as a body they were doing their duty. Most of the enforcement agents Mr. Kramer described as men who "could take a drink in order to carry out their orders," but his best agent, he said, was a Methodist minister.

LEADER IN NATION-WIDE FARM BUREAU WORK TO BE HERE

President Brubaker of Lancaster Bureau and State Federation to Address Fayette Farmers.

J. C. Brubaker, president of the Lancaster County Farm Bureau will speak Thursday afternoon, January 13 at a meeting held in connection with the Farm Products Show in Uniontown. Mr. Brubaker will discuss farm bureau work, emphasizing possible future developments. He is a "dirt" farmer and comes from the "Garden Spot" of America with a real message for every Fayette county farmer.

The Farm Bureau in Lancaster county has been organized practically as long as any bureau in the state. Some time ago, however, a sound, aggressive program was worked out which portrays a far greater vision of farm bureau work than anything previously conceived. Mr. Brubaker has been a progressive leader in this work and comes to Fayette county filled with courage and optimism for the future development of the farmer and agriculture in general.

In addition to being a very active member of the Lancaster County Farm Bureau, Mr. Brubaker is also a member of the state committee of seven members appointed to consider State Farm Bureau Federation. In this capacity he has attended meetings of the American Farm Bureau Federation and consequently has had comprehensive view of farm bureau work from a national standpoint.

"We are exceedingly fortunate in getting Mr. Brubaker to come to Fayette county and out of respect for him besides the good that we will get from what he says, every farmer in the county should attend the meeting," says B. H. Sweeney, farm agent, through whose efforts the visit of Mr. Brubaker to Fayette county has been arranged.

GRIFFITH STILL AT LARGE

Bloodhounds to Be Placed on Trail of West Virginia "Bad Man."

By Associated Press.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Warden Terrell today doubted the reward of $500 he offered last night for the arrest of William Griffith, a life convict, who is believed to have been the head of a plot in the state penitentiary here and burn the buildings. State and county officers were busy notifying points in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia to be on the lookout for Griffith who the warden said was a "bad man."

Investigation during the night convinced the warden that Griffith had three accomplices and search is being made for them among the prisoners. As Griffith was the only man who got away in the confusion, bloodhounds are being brought from Clarkburg and Parkersburg in the hope that the trail will be picked up. Damage caused by the fire was estimated at $3,000.

Edenborn Creek, Father of Five, Killed on Eve of Festival Day.

SLAYER MAKES ESCAPE

Turkey Roasted, Cake Baked, Nearly Everything Ready for the Feast When Grim Tragedy Struck on Scene to Spoil It All; Had Been Drinking.

Today, Greek Christmas, was to have been an occasion of joy in the home of George Vonovich, a miner at Edenborn. Elaborate preparations had been made for the feast for Vonovich, his wife and five children. Instead it was a day of deepest gloom. Vonovich lay dead at a morgue in Uniontown, the victim of a bullet said to have been fired by Albert Temersovic, a boarder, during an argument that rose at the supper table last evening. Vonovich died at 2:15 this morning at the Uniontown hospital. The alleged slayer escaped.

Vonovich and Temersovic and a number of other men were seated about a table. It is said they had been drinking. Incensed at a remark Vonovich is said to have made Temersovic leaped to his feet, shouted "You will not live to say that again to me" and fired two shots, one of which struck Vonovich in the right side.

Everything was ready for the Christmas dinner. A turkey had been roasted, fruit cake baked and the dishes that go to make up a dinner were in the course of preparation.

Of the children left fatherless the oldest is six years and the youngest two months.

Vonovich was 33 years old, Temersovic is 35.

HILL TOPPERS WIN GAME

Tonight the Connellsville high school team will either show it "has the goods" or is to be slated as a second rater in the local section of the Western Pennsylvania interscholastic athletic league, when it plays the Bradnock "quintet." The locals are primed for the battle and have picked up considerable steam under the direction of Coach Rupp, this week after a big falling off during the holidays.

The team is under a handicap of being composed almost entirely of short boys, giving taller adversaries a margin over them. To overcome this big obstacle, Coach Rupp is perfecting a short pass that is mighty hard to break up. Speed is the only other essential to the success of the team using the short pass.

Regardless of the fact that the high school losers are going fairly well this week there is room for considerable improvement. Neld, who stepped out last season and played a game that surprised fans, is not measuring up to his capabilities. During the year Neld has increased in weight and size and is of the proportions now where he should be a big asset to the Cokers.

Neld is not the only player on the team that is far below what he ought to be, judging from past performances. There are about four out of every five candidates who are not living up to the training rules, one of the most drastic requirements of the floor game, where training counts more than weight or height. On Wednesday night, three squads of 25 each went on the floor, executing short passes and at the end of 20 minutes of this work, practically every one was ready to quit. Poor condition was entirely to blame.

If the Cokers have an idea they are going to go along through the heavy schedule facing them without dragging the colors in the dust they will have to "perk up" a little. Memories of Paabody and St. Vincent's should serve to awaken the team to the fact that victory comes only through the utmost effort and greatest endurance.

Whipkey, football halfback, has reported for basketball practice. He is playing a guard.

The North End Lions were defeated by the Hill Top Panthers Tuesday night at the Parochial school hall, 21-10. Games may be secured with the Hill Tops by calling Emerson Huey, Tri-State 739.

When high school goes on the floor tonight, fans will get an agreeable surprise. The new uniforms for the 1921 season have arrived and will be worn for the first time. The new outfits are "stunners." The team has now been completely outfitted in new jerseys, trousers, socks and shoes. The new clothes are a change from those which have been worn during past seasons.

A number of inquiries have been received regarding the outcome of the Christmas afternoon boxing match between Mickey Forkin and Al Doly at Boyer's Hall. Forkin won the fight by a knockout in the third round.

The high school squad has been cut down this week in order to give the varsity the fullest opportunity for practice in preparation for the Bradnocks.

The game tonight will see teams of two college chums do battle. Rupp's boys want him to get the victory and have set themselves with a grim determination to see that he does.

The members of Sponsors' club, the girl team, proved their ability to be classed as basketball players of a high standard, when the Kelly & Jones girls' team was walloped in the game at the armory last evening. The locals, recently played with the visitors. The Sponsors have a lineup composed almost entirely of the high school team turned out last season. Miss Anna Melton, instructor at that institution. A stronger team will be placed against the Sponsors for the next game.

TWO NEW BOXERS TO

OPEN NEXT SHOW HERE:
The forthcoming boxing show at the Fayette A. C. which takes place Saturday, January 16, will show two newcomers in the game. Glister Burkett of South Connellsville has been matched to meet Orville Thorpe of Dunbar in the opening bout of four rounds. This will be the first appearance of either boy in the squared circle.

Aside from the first preliminary, Duke Barry, the mat-hammer, has completed his semi-final bout. This will feature Mike Moran of Mount Washington and Pete Zivie, the former world's amateur bantamweight champion. The added attraction will be the amusing and side splitting comic feature, a battle royal.

Barry hopes to be able to announce his star feature bout of 10 rounds in a day or so. Tom Caforio of Scottsdale will referee the contests.

HELPS FORWARD PASS

Colonel Michael J. Lynch, former Brown university basketball star, who received a tryout with the Giants in 1907, is being credited as being responsible for the deadly accuracy of Gus Oden, Brown quarterback, in throwing the forward pass. Lynch is working on the theory that a football can be passed with all the accuracy of a baseball with proper training and he has been coaching Oden in throwing the ball. The coaching of Lynch is bearing fruit and Oden is now regarded as one of the best passers in football.

BEST AGE OF HEAVYWEIGHTS

Fighters Begin to Go Back at 27 or 28 and Pull Off on Passing 30, Says the Dope.

They say Jack Dempsey is better now than he will be a year hence. Heavyweights are said to be at their best at the age of twenty-six. They start going back at twenty-seven or twenty-eight and pull off on passing thirty. A list of champions of the past proves this. The list follows: John L. Sullivan at the age of thirty-four was knocked out by Jim Corbett. Jim Corbett was thirty-seven when he was knocked out by Fitzsimmons.

Fitzsimmons was thirty-seven when he closed the canvas at Coney Island and Jim Jeffries was made champion. Jim Jeffries was thirty-five when Jack Johnson put the skids under him at Reno.

Jack Johnson was thirty-seven when he played the dying gladiator to Jess Willard at Havana, Cuba. Willard claims that he was thirty-two years of age when Dempsey dropped him at Toledo.

Thirty seems to be the dangerous age.

AVERAGE FOR YEAR PER TON AT OVEN ESTIMATED AT $8.30

Higher by Dollar Than in History of Region and More Than 75
Per Cent in Excess of Price for Previous Year; Over Three Times That For 1916; Range Is $5 to $18.

From Weekly Courier

Annex Review of the Coke Trade
The Courier again the average value of coke shipped from the Connellsville and Lower Connellsville districts in the year 1920 at $8.30 per net ton on cogens. This is by more than a dollar the highest average in the history of the region and compares with $7.70 in 1919, $7.25, the next highest average, in 1918, $6.25 in 1917 and $5.88 in 1916. Prior to 1917 the highest average had been $3.00, that having been the average in 1907.

Unlike 1919, the year 1920 showed a wide range of prices realized, and this was true equally of spot coke and of contract coke. In spot furnace coke the year opened with the government price of $6.00, July saw coke selling at $13.48 and highest, and the year closed with $6.60 being shaded in contract furnace coke there was the range from $5.00, involved in a limited quantity of flat price coke sold for the first half year to an adjustment price of $7.25 on ratio contracts made at four to one without limit in the months in which basic pig iron was $19.50 at Valley furnaces.

There were wide fluctuations in the quantity of coke shipped from time to time. Prices in general were much lower in the first half of the year than in the second half, but the first half again was divisible into two periods, the first quarter showing the lower prices and the second quarter the higher prices, with light shipments in April and May on account of the rail strike. In the second half, on the other hand, while there was a high average price there were low prices in the late weeks of the year, a time when shipments were light and the respect conditions were different from those that usually obtain in a widely fluctuating market the prices being usually the highest when the supplies are the lightest. Such factors are of course fully taken into account in computing the Courier average.

Thus, while the average of the spot furnace coke market was $13.48 for July and $8.35 for December, there was a much larger tonnage of spot coke sold in July than in December, and thus the $8.35 spot coke of December pulled the general average down only a trifle. To an extent this influence affected the average price realized on ratio contracts. For instance, on the four to one ratio contracts that were common for the second half of the year there was more coke shipped when pig iron was $19.50 than was shipped in December, when the average price of pig iron was down to $33.

Price Adjustment Problem
The first contracts for furnace coke for 1920 delivery were made in the first part of November, one of two being put through at $5.00 flat, the other followed by several contracts at $5.50, and contracting at $6.00 was in progress when operators practically withdrew from the market at flat prices. The flat price contracts generally carried a proviso for an adjustment against the expected increase in cost due to the expected increase in bituminous coal mining wages, so that actual prices realized were largely in excess of the prices written into the contracts. There followed some contracting at the ratio of five and one half, to one against basic pig iron at Valley furnaces this contracting being followed by other business at a higher ratio of five to one. Then, on December 8, 1919, the government with control prices on coke were established again, $6.00 for furnace coke and $7.00 for foundry coke. That put a stop to further contracting, as operators would sell at these prices no farther ahead than was necessary. At the time it was estimated that about 60 per cent of the first half business had been put under contract. The deliveries on ratio contracts represented a higher ratio than this, as production was restricted, but deliveries on flat price contracts were quite satisfactory to the furnaces.

A fairly large tonnage of coke was delivered during the first quarter of 1920 at the government prices. The movement in the open market, in the form of spot sales, was rather light, but a great many arrangements were made between operators and regular customers for delivery at fixed prices from month to month the fixed price being the government price while that lasted higher prices being fixed in April, May and June in keeping with prices developed in the spot market.

Ratio Basis Rules
As to contracting for furnace coke for the second half of the year, in the early stages of the negotiations, little tonnage was closed at a flat price of $11, but there was not much disposition on the part of either producers or consumers to close at flat prices. Various arrangements were made, but the most common of all was a ratio basis of 1 to 1 against basic pig iron at Valley furnaces. Basic iron in the half year ranged from $18.50 late in August and through September as the top price down to $33 in December as the lowest price of the year.

Foundry coke sold at widely varied prices, but the general average was about $1.25 over furnace coke this being a slightly greater spread than has usually obtained.

Teddy hated to wash his face more than once a day. Just as vehemently he liked to use the hose to sprinkle the flowers. Father had to remonstrate with him for over-prinking his flowers. "You'll make them wilt if you sprinkle them at any time except in the morning," he told him.

A few days later mother was trying to persuade him to wash his face for lunch. Then grandmother tried to use her influence. "Why I always wash my face before lunch," she told him.

Then Teddy looked at grandma's wrinkles and remembered the flowers. "Yes, and just see how wilted it is," he retorted.—Indianapolis News

An instant I hesitated, and then, releasing my grasp upon the supporting ornament, I swung out into space at the end of the strap. Far below me lay the brilliantly lighted streets, the hard pavements, and death. There was a little jerk at the top of the supporting strap, and a heavy slapping, grating sound which turned me cold with apprehension; then the hook caught and I was safe.

Clambering quickly aloft I grasped the edge of the eaves and drew myself to the surface of the room above. As I gained my foot I was confronted by the sentry on duty, into the muzzle of whose revolver I found myself looking.

"Who are you and whence came you?" he cried.

"I am an air scout, friend, and very near a dead one, for just by the merest chance I escaped falling to the avenue below," I replied.

"But how came you upon the roof, man? Quick, explain yourself, or I call the guard."

"Look you here, sentry, and you shall see how I came and how close a shave I had to not coming at all," I answered, turning toward the edge of the roof, where I saw the sentry's feet below, at the end of my strap, hung all my weapons.

The fellow, acting on impulse of curiosity, stepped to my side and to his undoing, for as he leaned to peer over the eaves I grasped him by his throat and his right arm and threw him heavily to the roof. The weapon dropped from his grasp, and my fingers choked off his attempted cry for assistance. I sagged and bound him and then hung him over the edge of the roof as I myself had hung a few minutes before. I knew it would be morning before he would be discovered, and I needed all the time that I could gain.

Donning my trappings and weapons I hastened to the eaves, and soon had out both my machine and Kantos Kan's. Making his feet behind mine I started my engine, and climbing over the edge of the roof I dove down into the streets of the city far below the plane usually occupied by the air patrol. In less than a minute I was settling safely upon the roof of our apartment beside the astonished Kantos Kan.

It was decided that I was to try to make Helium, while Kantos Kan was to enter the palace and dispatch Sab Than. If successful, he was then to follow me, bidding each other farewell as we rose together and sped in the direction of the palace, which lay in the route which I must take to reach Helium.

As we neared the high tower a patrol shot down from above, throwing its piercing searchlight full upon my craft, and a voice roared out a command to halt, following with a shot as I paid no attention to the hail. Kantos Kan dropped quickly into the darkness, while I rose steadily and at terrific speed raced through the Martian sky followed by a dozen of the air-scout craft which had joined the pursuit, and later by a great cruiser carrying a hundred men and a battery of rapid-fire guns. By twisting and turning my little machine, now rising and now falling, I managed to elude their searchlights most of the time, but I was also losing ground by these tactics, and so I decided to hazard everything on a straight-away course and leave the result to fate and the speed of my machine.

Kantos Kan had shown me a trick of sailing, which is known only to the navy of Helium, that greatly increased the speed of our machine, so that I felt sure I could distance my pursuers if I could dodge their projectiles for a few moments.

Gradually I left my pursuers further and further behind, and I was just congratulating myself on my lucky escape, when a well-directed shot from the cruiser exploded at the prow of my little craft. The concussion nearly capsize her, and with a sickening plunge she hurtled downward through the dark night.

How far I fell before I regained control of the plane I do not know, but I must have been very close to the ground when I started to rise again, as I plainly heard the squealing of animals below me. Rising, again, I scanned the heavens for my pursuers, and finally making out their lights far behind me, saw that they were halting, evidently in search of me.

Not until their lights were no longer discernible did I venture to flash my little lamp upon my compass, and then I found to my consternation that a fragment of the projectile had utterly destroyed my only guide, as well as my speedometer. It was true I could follow the stars to the general direction of Helium, but without knowing the exact location of the city or the speed at which I was traveling my chances for finding it were slim.

Helium lies a thousand miles southwest of Zondanga, and with my compass intact I should have made the trip, barring accidents, in between four and five hours. As it turned out, however, morning found me speeding over a vast expanse of dead sea bottom after nearly six hours of continuous flight at high speed.

About noon I passed low over a great dead city of ancient Mars, and as I skimmed over across the plain I came full upon several thousand green warriors engaged in a terrific battle. Scarcely had I seen them than a volley of shots was directed at me, and with the almost unerring accuracy of their aim my little craft was instantly a ruined wreck, skidding erratically to the ground.

I fell almost directly in the center of the fierce combat, among warriors who had not seen my approach, so busily were they engaged in life and death struggles. As my machine sank among them I realized that it was light or die, with good chances of dying in any event, and as I struck the ground with drawn sword ready to defend myself as I could.

I fell beside a huge monster who was engaged with three antagonists, and as I glanced at his fierce face, filled with the light of battle, I recognized Tars Tarkas the Thark. He did not see me, as I was a trifle behind him, and just then the three warriors opposing him and whom I recognized as Warhorns charged simultaneously. The mighty fellow made quick work of one of them, but in stepping back for another thrust he fell over a dead body behind him and was down and at the mercy of his foes in an instant. Quick as lightning they were upon him, and Tars Tarkas would have been gathered to his fathers in short order had I not sprung before his prostrate form and engaged his adversaries. I had accounted for one of them when the mighty Thark regained his feet and quickly settled the other.

He gave me one look, and a slight smile touched his grim lips as, coughing my shoulder, he said:

"I would scarcely recognize you, John Carter, but there is no other upon Barsoom who would have done what you have for me. I think I have learned that there is such a thing as friendship, my friend."

He said no more, nor was there opportunity for the Warhorns were closing in about us, and together we fought, shoulder to shoulder, during all that long hot afternoon, until the tide of battle turned and the remnant of the fierce Warhorns' horde fell back upon their heels and fled into the gathering darkness.

On our return to the city after the battle we had gone directly to Tars Tarkas' quarters, where I was left alone while the chieftain attended the customary council which immediately follows an engagement.

As I was awaiting the return of the green warrior I heard something move in an adjoining apartment, and as I glanced up there rushed suddenly upon me a huge and hideous creature which bore me backward upon the pile of armor and furs upon which I had been reclining. It was Woolo, faithful, loving Woolo. He had found his way back to Tarkas and, as Tars Tarkas later told me, had gone immediately to my former quarters where he had taken up his pathetic and seemingly hopeless watch for my return.

"Tars Tarkas knows that you are here, John Carter," said Tars Tarkas, on his return from the Jeddak's quarters; "Sarkoja saw and recognized you as we were returning. Tars Tarkas has ordered me to bring you before him tonight. I have ten Tharks with me, and you may take your choice from among them, and I will accompany you to the nearest waterway that leads to Helium. Come, we must start."

"And when you return, Tars Tarkas?" I asked.

"The wild calots, possibly, or worse," he replied. "Unless I should chance to have the opportunity I have so long waited of battling with Tal Hajus."

"We will stay, Tars Tarkas, and see Tal Hajus tonight. You shall not sacrifice yourself, and it may be that tonight you can have the choice you want."

While we were eating I repeated to Tars Tarkas the story which Sab Than told me that night upon the sea bottom during the march to Thark.

He said but little, but the great muscles of his face worked in passion and in agony at recollection of the horrors which had been heaped upon the only thing he had ever loved in all his cold, cruel, terrible existence.

He no longer demurred when I suggested that we go before Tal Hajus, only saying that he would like to speak to Sarkoja first. At his request I accompanied him to her quarters.

"Sarkoja," said Tars Tarkas, "forty years ago you were instrumental in bringing about the torture and death of a woman named Gogava. I have just discovered that the warrior who loved that woman has learned of your tying one end of a strap about your neck and the other end to a wild thorn, merely to test your fitness to survive, he could scarcely wait to see me and was standing erect upon his platform glowering at the entrance as I came in.

"Strap him to that pillar," he shrieked. "We shall see who it is dares strike the mighty Tal Hajus. Heat the irons; with my own hands I shall burn the eyes from his head that he may not pollute my person with his vile gaze."

"Chieftains of Thark," I cried, turning to the assembled council and ignoring Tal Hajus, "I have been a chief among you, and today I have fought for Thark's shoulder to shoulder with her greatest warrior. You owe me at least a hearing. I have won that much today. You claim to be just people."

"Silence," roared Tal Hajus. "Gag the creature and bind him as I command."

"Justice, Tal Hajus," exclaimed Lomques Ptomel. "Who are you to set aside the customs of ages among the Tharks?"

"Yes, justice," echoed a dozen voices, and so, while Tal Hajus fumed and frothed, I continued.

"You are a brave people and you love bravery, but where was you tonight? I did not see him in the thick of battle; he was not there. He renders defenseless women and little children in his lair, but how recently has one of you seen him fight with men? Why, even I, a midge beside him, felled him with a single blow of my fist. Is it of such that the Tharks fashion their Jeddaks? There stands beside me now a great Thark, a mighty warrior and a noble sign. Chieftains, how sounds Tars Tarkas, Jeddak of Thark?"

A roar of deep-throated applause greeted this suggestion.

"It but remains for this council to command, and Tal Hajus must prove his fitness to rule. Were he a brave man he would invite Tars Tarkas to combat, for he does not love him, but Tal Hajus is afraid; Tal Hajus, your Jeddak, is a coward. With my bare hands I could kill him, and he knows it."

After I ceased there was tense silence, as all eyes were riveted upon Tal Hajus. He did not speak or move, but the bloody green of his countenance turned livid, and the froth froze upon his lips.

"Tal Hajus," said Lomques Ptomel in a cold, hard voice, "never in my long life have I seen a Jeddak of the Tharks so humiliated. There could be but one answer to this arraignment. We wait it." And still Tal Hajus stood as though petrified.

"Chieftains," continued Lomques Ptomel, "shall the Jeddak, Tal Hajus, prove his fitness to rule over Tars Tarkas?"

There were twenty chieftains about the rostrum, and twenty words flashed high in assent.

There was no alternative. That decree was final, and so Tal Hajus drew his longsword and advanced to meet Tars Tarkas.

The combat was soon over, and, with his foot upon the neck of the dead monster, Tars Tarkas became Jeddak among the Tharks.

His first act was to make me a full-fledged chieftain with the rank I had won by my combats the first few weeks of my captivity among them.

Seeing the favorable disposition of the warriors toward Tars Tarkas, as well as toward me, I grasped the opportunity to enlist them in my cause against Zondanga. I told Tars Tarkas the story of my adventures, and in a few words had explained to him the thought I had in mind.

"John Carter has made a proposal," he said, addressing the council, "which touches with my sanction. I shall put it to you briefly. Deljah Thoris, the princess of Helium, who was our prisoner, is now held by the Jeddak of Zondanga, whose son she must wed to save her country from devastation at the hands of the Zondangian forces."

"John Carter suggests that we rescue her and return her to Helium. The lot of Zondanga would be magnificent, and I have often thought that had we an alliance with the people of Helium we could obtain sufficient assurance of sustenance to permit us to increase the size and frequency of our battalions, and thus become unquestionably supreme among the green men of all Barsoom. What say you?"

It was a chance to fight, an opportunity to loot, and they rose to the bait as a speckled trout to a fly.

In three days we were on the march toward Zondanga, one hundred thousand strong, as Tars Tarkas had been able to enlist the services of three smaller herds on the promise of the great loot of Zondanga.

We traveled quickly by night, timing our marches so that we camped during the day at deserted cities where, even to the heasts, we were all kept indoors during the daylight hours. On the march Tars Tarkas, through his remarkable ability and statesmanship, enlisted fifty thousand more warriors from various herds, so that, ten days after we set out we halted at midnight outside the great walled city of Zondanga, one hundred and fifty thousand strong.

The task of obtaining entry to the city devolved upon me. I took twenty dismounted warriors and approached one of the small gates that pierced the walls at short intervals.

Placing three of my warriors with their faces to the wall, and arms locked, I commanded two more to mount to their shoulders, and a sixth I ordered to climb upon the shoulders of the upper two. The head of the foremost warrior towered over forty feet from the ground.

In this way, with ten warriors, I built a series of three steps from the ground to the shoulders of the topmost man. Then starting from the same distance behind them I ran swiftly up from one tier to the next, and with a final bound from the broad shoulders of the highest I clutched the top of the great wall and quietly drew myself to its breast and crevice. After a moment's length of rest upon an equal number of my warriors, these ladders we had previously fastened together, and passing one end to the topmost warrior I lowered the other end and cautiously over the opposite side of the wall toward the avenue below. No one was in sight, so, lowering myself to the end of my leather strap, I dropped the remaining thirty feet to the pavement below.

I had learned from Kantos Kan the secret of opening these gates, and in another moment my twenty great fighting men stood within the doomed city of Zondanga.

I found to my delight that I had entered at the lower boundary of the enormous palace grounds. Dispatching one of my men to Tars Tarkas for a detail of fifty Tharks, with word of my intentions, I ordered ten warriors to capture and open one of the great gates while with the nine remaining I took the other. We were to do our work quietly, no shots were to be fired and no general advance made until I had reached the palace with my fifty Tharks. Our plans worked to perfection. The two parties we met were dispatched to their fathers, upon the banks of the lost sea of Korus, and the guards at both gates followed them in silence.

OPERATORS ARE NOT IN HURRY TO MAKE CONTRACTS

Prefer to Await Developments in Process of National Readjustment.

SOME ARE ON RATIO BASIS

Little Change in Spot Coke Market But Increased Inquiries Have Served to Soften the Situation to Some Extent; Basic Iron Price $30.

Special to The Weekly Courier.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Apparently by common consent, coke operators and furnacemen have left off considering the matter of contracting on coke for the present half year, and the matter is left in abeyance. A very considerable volume of business, as noted in previous reports, has been placed on "contract" chiefly on the general basis of a relation of five to one against basic pig iron at Valley furnaces. Some early contracts were put through at approximately four and one-half to one, but the trade seems to regard it as a foregone conclusion that such contracts will be revised before they become really operative. The matter is not at issue at present since the furnaces involved are out of blast, and as the contracts are "requirement" contracts, according to the usual practice, the buyers are under no obligation while their stocks are idle.

Some of the operators do not have regular asking prices on contracts, preferring to consider the matter when occasion arises. Others have definite views, and are quite willing to wait for actual negotiations until furnaces seem to be in position to operate. In general, the price idea represents a ratio of five to one against basic pig iron, but there are limitations. One large interest is ready to accept five to one when basic iron is $30, Valley, but will insist on a stiffer relation if basic iron is above that figure, and that seems natural enough for since basic has already declined to $30, and may go lower, any higher price than $30 would represent a strengthening situation, in which coke should receive very substantial benefit.

Only six merchant blast furnaces in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys are in operation, and one or two of these are likely to go out within a fortnight, while the trade believes the present outlook for the majority are almost certain to be out by the beginning of February. The furnaces are affecting scarcely any sales, and they are absolutely set against making any pig iron that is not sold. As furnaces go out they accumulate a little iron, but only enough to apply on contracts with customers. While there is a fair amount of business on books, the total represents only a very few weeks of operation, and most of the shipments are suspended, to be resumed when the customer has more occasion to consume iron.

The number of new contracts that became effective with the turn of the year falls considerably short of the number that expired with the old year, but the furnaces involved in this difference are in most cases out of blast so that there has not been much increase in demand in the spot market. In a few instances the case has been aided over by the furnace buying for a limited period, either three months or simply the month of January. For January coke operators have been able to secure somewhat more than the prevailing price for spot coke.

While there is not much change in the spot coke situation there is slightly more inquiry this week for spot furnace coke, and this has served to stiffen the situation a trifle, for towards the close of last week some coke was being offered at $5.00, considered by operators as an abnormally low price. This week the objective of sellers is $5.50, but it is not particularly difficult to pick up small lots at $5.25, and it is possible that $5.00 might be done in exceptional cases, merely to move a few carloads. In general the coke operators have curtailed their production in keeping with the situation, but furnaces have been blowing out so rapidly that operators had some difficulty in following the demand. If they fell behind, however, it was only for a few days, there being no doubt that henceforth production of coke will be closely regulated to requirements, and no coke is likely to press the market for sale at a possible loss. Accordingly the feeling in most quarters is that spot coke is going to advance from the present level instead of declining farther.

Foundry coke for spot shipment has held its own very well. Prices are the same as formerly quoted, and the only difference is that there are more brands of good coke to be had within the price range. The spot market is quotable as follows:

Furnace ..... $5.25 to $5.50
Foundry ..... $7.00 to $7.50

Completely with the opening of the new year a prominent Valley merchant producer of pig iron began offering

Bessemer iron at $32, Valley, and basic at $30, Valley, these prices representing declines of $3 from the nominal market previously quoted. Simply, perhaps, because nothing occurred to bring prices into question.

Bessemer iron was quoted throughout December at $35 and basic at $32. The setting of a $20 price on basic iron seems to determine what price will be realized on basic coke contracts during January as it does not seem likely that any further change will occur in the market for a while. The price, on a 5 to 1 ratio contract, will therefore probably be $5.00. While that is not a very satisfactory price to coke operators, $20 is not a very satisfactory price to furnacemen considering that they were getting $25.00 not long ago.

Foundry iron is not very clearly defined, but lately there have been offerings at $33, Valley, or $2 under the previously quoted market, and it is reported that some resale lots have gone at considerably less than this. As a rule the trade holds that dealers do not make the market. The Valley market as a whole is now quotable as follows:

Bessemer ..... $32.00
Basic ..... $30.00
Valley ..... $32.00
Foundry ..... $33.00

These prices are f. o. b. Valley furnaces, freight to Pittsburgh being $1.35.

W. F. Snyder & Company report average prices in December computed for actual sales reported, at $35 for Bessemer and $33 for basic at Valley furnaces.
